SILVER EXPECTED TO SELL HIGHER

GREATEST ADVANCE, SAY AUTHORITIES, TO COME WITH CLOSE OF WAR

Those who are theorizing about business conditions after the close of the war seem to neglect bar silver, which all interests agree should score a remarkable advance, says the Boston News Bureau.

While the war goes on, use of silver in the arts in the countries at war is nil. Proportion of silver used to total silver production is as three to five. When the war closes, use of silver for the arts may be expected to make up for lost time.

One of the biggest traders in silver in this city says:

We are very bullish on silver after the close of the war. We expect a moderate advance at present, inasmuch as India this season has bought no silver and as the requirements of England and France and other countries for coinage purposes is great.

During the early months of the war soldiers and officers received their pay in paper money. So long as such forces were in their own country payment in such a medium worked all right, but when the armies reached remote points in France and came to the Dardanelles, something other than paper money had to be used. Gold could not be of service because by far the largest part of the gold supply had to be kept in reserve and a great deal had to flow to America. In consequence, England, France and other countries turned to silver and have coined vast amounts.

Another factor will come into prominence during the coming months. That is China, where the measure providing standardization of coinage throughout China, and long dormant during the republic, is being revived. Should China press at once the standardization, there would be immediate demand for 150,000,000 ounces, valued at present at about $75,000,000.

Mexico has produced practically no silver for months, and the Cobalt region has been unable to ship much silver, as its refining processes were dependent upon Germany, and that country naturally lent no aid to the Canadian region.

As an effort to this dearth of supply, Peru and Chile have shipped considerable silver to the United States. In addition, silver as a by-product of the copper companies has increased proportionately to the advance in copper production.

While it is probably a far cry to the remonetization of silver, something of the kind, under some less alarming name, has been suggested as probable when the impoverished nations of Europe start in to adjust their finances and their circulating media after the war. Germany especially and England and France to a less extent have at present a mass of paper money, with small gold backing. While the war is in progress, this currency is accepted without question, but on conclusion of the conflict, it is predicted, there will be demand for a more adequate security. Gold will be demanded in international commerce and to settle foreign debts, and silver men believe that some scheme will be found to back the paper currency with a silver security, somewhat as our silver certificates are based on silver dollars. A demand for silver for this purpose, should be the plan ever be adopted, would play an important part in raising the market price of the metal.

At the present, practically the only silver mines, excepting those in the west, in active operation are those at Cobalt, Ontario, the rest of the world's production coming principally as a by-product from the electrolytic copper refineries. The silver values in copper ore occur principally in the carbonates, usually near the surface, and decrease in the sulphide ores at greater depth, so that no substantial increases seem likely from existing copper mines.

"WATER MAC" IS DEAD

Andrew McCleary, a pioneer of Nevada, died several days ago in a hotel at Reno. Mr. McCleary was familiarly known as "Water Mac." The deceased built the water works at Virginia City. This was one of the engineering feats of the west. It was necessary to conduct the water in an inverted siphon, at the lowest point of which the pressure is enormous. He also built the Candelaria water works, bringing the water from the White Mountains, seventeen miles distant.

Coffee

Without the airtight tins such coffee as Schilling's Best would not be possible.

We could buy it and roast it, but couldn't get it to you without loss of flavor and strength. We couldn't grind it evenly, take-out the bitterish chaff—and moneyback the result.

You owe such fine coffee and real economy to the tin that protects it.
